WEDNESDAY September 17, 1800 THE EVENING STAR has the fullest Local Circulation of any Newspaper in the World, and as an Advertising Medium is worth more than all the other papers published in Washington.

The home and fortress of the Moorish Kings of Spain at Grenada, known as the Alhambra and immortalized in song and story, was partly destroyed by are yester lay morning. This is one of the three or four most superb buildings in the world and is universally considered the most intricately beautiful, even in its state of decay, of any, there being only the Taj-Mahal in India and the ruin of the Coliseum at Rome with which to compare it. Of course in the clement of grandeur it is exceeded by some of the noble cathedrals of Europe. The Albambra ("Ped Castle") has a magnificent prospect. standing boldly out on an elevated ground in full view of both mountains and valley, with the old Moorish city below. It has suffered much from the ravages of fire, time, war and neglect, but is still the chief object sought by the curious traveling eye and the principal ruin left of Arabian empire.

That suguet, not to say September body, the Parking Commission, has in due course submitted a communication to the District Commissioners concerning the caterpillar epidemic now prevailing in this town, in which communication it is stated ez cathedra that notwithstanding the caterpillars are very numerous they do no harm. Perhaps they don't-to the august, not to say September P.C., but what of the remaining two hundred and thirty-nine and odd thousand people residing here? Is it no harm that a beautiful young woman, under the silver light of the crescent moon, when she is in the very act of foreclosing emotional mortgage on a hesitating young man of large means, should with a sudden and impetuous scream frighten the immortal soul out of him and lose him forever, simply because one of those nawsty little fuzzy vermiculates dropped out of its proper place among the quivering aspen leaves with a soft yellow thud apon her snowy undulant neck and pranced around there like a colt in a pasture? Is there no harm in this? Is it no harm for a matron of mature years and resplendent in elegant garments to go about the streets with caterpillar passamenteric decorating her bonnet and her gown? Is it no harm for a young minister of the gospel, who is acting as a summer substitute, while his over-worked brother goes away to rollic at the seaside. upon ascending the pulpit on a quiet Sabbath morning, filled with the gentle spirit of the season, to discover up his clerical pant's leg an animated wad of sentient caterpillar about as big as a link of sausage and about as soft as a piece of custard pie? Is it no harm for a man to wander about his domestic prem-18es with caterpillars down his back until he has mental, moral and physical jim jams? Is it no harm-but why go on?

The conference committee on the tariff bill will have an interesting topic for discussion in Mr. Blaine's last letter on reciprocity. In his previous letters the subject had been strongly presented, but in the Boston Journal, this morning, appears, addressed to the editor, a summing up of the argument with suggestive additional facts and reasons. Than Mr. Blaine there is no more trenchant political writer living in the United States, and few there are in the past who may be compared with him in vigor of thought and piquancy of expression. Blaine's manner of stating the question facilitates progress.

A democratic exchange insists that New York less not been a pivotal state for some years. Well, in '84 the democratic candidate for the presidency carried it and the election, in '89 the same man lost it and the election. If it wasn't the pivot he wanted the last time, it wasn't the pivot the other man wanted the first time. There are pivots for some people that are not pivots for other people. Again the parties may have different pivotal points. To the democrats New York is still pivotal, to the republicans the pivot is out nor'west.

Mr. Kennedy's famous speech has been referred to the House judiciary committee, which will no doubt recommend it for action and under a suspension of the rules it will be recommitted in committee of the whole House on the state of the Union and by the time it reaches the Senate, that dignified body in high dudgeon will pass it without speaking to it. That is the parliamentary tradition and deviation therefrom is very seldom.

If the successes of the republican party in the recent Brazilian elections were won without pressure from the provisional government. they are cause for congratulation in liberal circles everywhere. In that view they imply the popular origin of, or at least the popular acquiescence in, the revolution.

There are four distinguished citizens of Japan now in this country to examine the methods of education here, but they have come too late. To have struck richness in an educational line they should have come during our last presidential campaign.

The suggestion that the most fitting monument to Eriesson would be one of our battle ships named after him, is eminently fitting, provided that the ship does not run into a coal flat or collide with a mud bar in the Potomac.

Everybody in Washington will be glad to hear of the renomination of Representative Hemphill of South Carolina. Mr. Hemphill has not only represented his state in Congress with signal grace and ability, but he has worked so efficiently on the District committee in behalf of District interests that he has won the regard of our whole community.

The services of Mt. Enloe of Tennessee as a republican leader were respectfully but firmly declined yesterday by the majority of the House. His services as a censor were tacitly accepted because they couldn't be rejected under the circumstances.

Doubtless you are aware that for the medium and low priced Hose-Hose costing from 25c. to 35c. pair—the duties have been raised from 25 to 50 per cent. In fact, the new tariff bill will make it aimest imcossible to sell an imported Hose at 26c. Fortunately the bulk of our fall and winter importations have arrived, so that we shall not be compelled to raise prices until the time comes for giving further orders. We don't ask any credit for not raising prices now, but de for giving you the hint that higher prices must prevail
